

Abstract

Methods and systems for executing an electronic transaction are provided, including parsing pages of a web server that execute a transaction to separate static from transactional content, identifying and storing rules for executing a transaction on the site, and presenting 5 displays that enable a user to complete the transaction without interacting directly with the site, such as by interacting with a banner ad, electronic mail, cellular phone, or other simple interface.